Dear Friends,

Over the last three years, the donateNYC program has grown significantly. It is now easier than ever for residents, businesses, nonprofits—all New Yorkers—to reduce the amount of waste they send to landfill by donating and reusing goods, and to support vital social services for New Yorkers in need.

By the end of 2018, donateNYC’s map contained over 650 locations in all five boroughs where residents can donate, find, or buy gently-used items. Ranging from thrift shops and antique stores to social service organizations and community kitchens, these reuse locations accept and distribute a wide variety of items. We are currently on track to surpass 1,000 locations covering every ZIP code, meaning that anyone who can download the app, search on the donateNYC website, or call 311 can find reuse options near their home.

2018 also saw significant growth—138 percent—in the number of businesses and organizations registered to donate and receive goods on the donateNYC Exchange. More and more businesses with surplus or gently-used items are choosing to donate over discard, and nonprofit organizations are saving money by seeking quality second-hand goods instead of buying new.

The donateNYC Partnership program has more than doubled in size over three years, reaching 70 Partners in 2018. These Partners have diverted a combined total of 169,119 tons of goods to be reused. This is real, measurable impact in support of NYC’s goal of sending zero waste to landfills.

Over the year, donateNYC raised the profile of donations and engaged even more New Yorkers through a reuse-focused Earth Day festival, behind-the-scenes tours of donateNYC Partners, an expanded National Thrift Store Day shopping event, and a first-ever second-hand holiday gift guide.

The profiles in this annual report demonstrate why reuse is such a vital part of New York City’s sustainability, resiliency, and quality of life goals. The NYC Department of Sanitation is proud to continue its support of the City’s dynamic donations and reuse community.

Sincerely,

Bridget Anderson
Deputy Commissioner
Bureau of Recycling & Sustainability
NYC Dept. of Sanitation
Mission & Overview

donateNYC Mission

To reduce needless waste and increase diversion of reusable material from landfills, NYC Department of Sanitation established donateNYC in 2016.

Our approach:

- Increase tonnage diversion by developing public-facing technological platforms and providing direct donation coordination.
- Increase public awareness of and access to opportunities for reuse and donation.
- Support and expand the city’s reuse infrastructure.
- Research and document the NYC reuse sector’s zero waste impact.
- Prepare and respond to emergency situations that result in surges of unsolicited donations.

Overview of Programs

Businesses and nonprofit organizations can use the donateNYC Exchange, an online materials reuse platform, to give and receive large quantities of gently used and surplus materials. Also for businesses, donateNYC is proud to launch the donateNYC food portal, the first municipally-administered food donation portal in the country, in 2019.

Residents can turn to the donateNYC Directory, an online and mobile search tool that locates convenient places to donate or find second-hand goods.

Local reuse organizations may join the donateNYC Partnership program, which offers members a variety of benefits including networking, publicity, data analysis, and events.
The donateNYC Partnership is a group of nonprofit organizations in New York City that accept and distribute second-hand and surplus goods. donateNYC provides Partners with networking opportunities, marketing assistance, donation referrals, and personalized environmental impact reports.

donateNYC Partners by the Numbers

Organizations that engage in materials reuse provide many benefits for the City: they reduce the amount of goods and materials destined for landfills; they provide usable goods to the public for free or at low cost; they conserve the energy and resources required to produce new items; and they create green jobs.

The contributions of reuse organizations are especially important in the context of the City’s goal to send zero waste to landfills. With funding from the Department of Sanitation, the NYC Center for Materials Reuse developed a proprietary Reuse Impact Calculator, which uses qualitative and quantitative information provided by donateNYC Partners to analytically describe the impact of the nonprofit reuse sector in New York City.

These two pages illustrate the impact of our donateNYC Partners in 2018. Please see our index of Partners beginning on page 14 of this report!

Diverted from the waste stream:

Our Partners kept more than 57,254 tons of material out of landfills in 2018.

Environmental Impacts:

Through accepting donations of goods, materials, and food in 2019, our Partners reduced greenhouse gas emissions by 198,500 metric tons of CO2 equivalent, and saved 1.515 million BTUs of energy...
The main goals of the NYC Center for Materials Reuse (NYCCMR) are to quantify materials reuse in New York City and to understand the environmental impact of local reuse. In order to accomplish this task, NYCCMR requires clean, robust materials data for accurate analysis. It can be difficult, however, for some organizations to dedicate staff and resources to tracking data about their contributions to waste diversion.

This past year, NYCCMR stationed staff at Animal Care Centers (ACC) locations for 14 days to weigh and track incoming donations. This field study provided ACC with an accurate estimate of their yearly in-kind donations. In 2018, ACC took in an estimated 8.10 tons of donations, made up of 36% textiles and 30% pet food. This information has helped ACC refine their operations and has also allowed NYCCMR to estimate ACC’s environmental impact.

donateNYC Partnership Highlights

Innovative Donation & Reuse Pilot Projects
donateNYC Partners have the opportunity to propose pioneering new models for reusing materials through the Innovative Donation & Reuse Pilot Projects Program. Applications are reviewed by an independent review committee and supported with the goal of aiding in the growth and capacity of nonprofits accepting second-hand and surplus goods.

Results from 2017-18 awardees

Big Reuse
Big Reuse’s pilot project examined the feasibility of remixing leftover latex paint into a viable product. Over the course of the project, they were able to sort, filter, mix, and repackage 636 gallons of paint to resell at their Gowanus Reuse Center rather than going to landfill. They concluded that their paint rescue program could be replicated and scaled up in the future.

Rebuilding Together NYC
Rebuilding Together NYC worked to bridge the gap between industry and salvage nonprofits by organizing a working group of NYC GreenBuilders. In addition to bringing together voices from across the sector to discuss deconstruction and salvage best practices, Rebuilding Together tested a new transportation model for salvage projects and improved their data collection methods to accurately measure project impact.
Sustainability Spotlight Series
This year, donateNYC launched the Sustainability Spotlight Series, a series of events designed to showcase the reuse activities of donateNYC Partners.

The first event took place on April 7, 2018 and offered a tour of FABSCRAP’s new warehouse space in the Brooklyn Army Terminal. After the tour, participants joined a volunteer sorting session to help sort fabric scraps that FABSCRAP received from commercial businesses and fashion/design brands.

The series continued on May 9, 2018 with a visit to the TDF Costume Collection located within New York’s historic Kaufman Astoria Studios. Attendees toured the Collection, which houses more than 80,000 costumes and accessories from Broadway and Off-Broadway productions, opera companies, and touring companies.

Holiday Gift Guide
This holiday season, donateNYC released a zero waste Holiday Gift Guide, which showed New Yorkers examples of unique finds offered by donateNYC Partner stores. The guide, showcased in media outlets such as NY1, Fox 5, and AM New York, showed that shopping at a donateNYC Partner store can save money and turn up one-of-a-kind gifts, all while supporting social services and giving items a second life outside of the landfill.
The holiday season was a bit more festive in Queens thanks to a donation of over 200 pounds of Christmas decorations from the Bronx. Queens became more fun with a donation of popcorn machines—thanks, Manhattan!

142 items were diverted from landfill by traveling from Manhattan to Staten Island.

Brooklyn donated 15 Mac desktop computers to Manhattan.

28 computer tables found a new home down the street in Staten Island.

Donation Spotlight

Since March 2018, donateNYC has been working with DSNY’s Zero Waste Schools team to prevent surplus public school furniture and supplies from going to waste. The collaboration diverted over 30 tons from landfill in 2018. In addition to reducing waste, every donation has provided crucial resources to nonprofits such as community centers and after-school programs.

As an example, desks and chairs donated by a public school in the Bronx were used to furnish a new computer center run by donateNYC Partner PowerMyLearning at the Caribbean American Center of New York (CACNY) in Brooklyn. Anny Chen, Program Coordinator at PowerMyLearning, put it this way: “The school furniture obtained through donateNYC’s Exchange provided an opportunity for CACNY to re-invent their space into an environment that is both welcoming and practical, which resulted in a community having access to resources that they may not have had access to before.

Another portion of this desk and chair donation was put to good use by West Harlem Group Assistance. They were looking to furnish their after-school and summer program at West Harlem Residence, a facility that provides families with transitional housing, employment assistance, and other social services.

Snapshot: Donate Food

donateNYC is excited to launch the country’s only municipally-administered food donation platform in March 2019. The donateNYC food portal makes hyper-local connections between businesses with excess edible food and organizations that can accept and distribute donated food. The food portal aims to reduce the amount of edible food going to landfill while supporting NYC’s food rescue and redistribution network.
The donateNYC Directory is a searchable map listing hundreds of locations throughout the five boroughs where New Yorkers can give and find gently-used goods.

The number of reuse outlets listed on the donateNYC Directory more than doubled in 2018!
Directory Find
The new Directory locations added in 2018 provide a variety of donated items to purchase or receive through distribution, the most frequently found being clothing/shoes, food, and art supplies.
